The strange American Dream

Let us hope this phenomenon doesn't come to Canada

Vicky Mochama
Metro | Toronto

Defying the polls, Donald J. Trump of New York is the president-elect of the United States.

He will be commander-in-chief of the most powerful military force in the world. He will be head of state for one of the largest players in international politics. He will be at the centre of American policy and culture for at least four years.

He is wholly unqualified to be president and yet, in a strange way, that is the American Dream. He wanted the job and he said everything he could until he got it. He saw something that the experts with their detailed maps and advanced forecasts didn't. He saw an America that felt left out of public life and he told them he would make them great again.

In the aftermath of the last two years of campaigning, America – and the world at large – will have to contend with what has been wrought. The racist, hate-filled angry mewling underbelly of American politics has been given voice. And now, it has been given a home in the Oval Office.

The feeling of exclusion is something I can empathize with. (In this case, I don't particularly want to but here we are.) This election result springs from the same well of racial hatred and white entitlement that has kept so many in America at the margins of policy and in unyielding poverty. People who are contending with their experience with this kind of exclusion have shouted aloud and selected Donald Trump as their leader.

I suspect that if he'd thought about it much he'd realize he doesn't truly want to be president. There will be days filled with meetings at the Office of Regulatory Affairs. He will have to parse the details of Office of Management and Budget. The job of president is as unglamorous as it is powerful. He has, in saying he will not concede the election if he lost, a contempt for the rules of American democracy.

In the Thanksgiving tradition of American presidents, Donald Trump will have to pardon a turkey, and I'm not sure that turkey will get off.

I'm supposed to say something hopeful here. I don't know that I have much in the way of hope.

What I do have is fear disguised as hope.

I hope that he doesn't mean what he says. I hope that his fans and voters aren't as violent as their votes suggest. I hope that he doesn't make Sarah Palin the Secretary of State. I hope this phenomenon doesn't come to Canada.

But these are intense days in hard times. Instead, I will try to hear the advice of a young Wellesley College graduate named Hillary Rodham Clinton who has become the woman to get closest to being President - not once but twice - who said, "Fear is always with us but we just don't have time for it. Not now."

Clinton camp ponders President Donald Trump

CLIFFHANGER

'We can smell the win': Trump Campaign manager says

An unexpectedly excellent showing by Trump in states around the country turned the U.S. presidential election into a tense Tuesday cliffhanger, with numerous key states too close to call at press time.

The early results showed a nation riven by racial and geographic divisions, and they belied polls that suggested a comfortable victory for Hillary Clinton. By 9:30 p.m., it was clear that an astonishing Trump upset was highly possible — though he still needed several states to go his way.

A Trump victory would give immense power to an erratic, never-elected Republican businessman whose behaviour and policy positions have alarmed much of the world and who would face no organized opposition in Congress.

Republicans retained control of the House of Representatives and appeared likely to keep the Senate.

Trump managed to eke out a lead in Florida, one of his must-win states, on the strength of high white turnout in rural counties. He won Ohio, where he had led for much of the past month, and North Carolina, where polls had shown a dead heat.

"Absolutely buoyant," Kellyanne Conway, Trump's campaign manager, told Yahoo News. "We can smell the win."

Clinton, vying to become the first female president, carried Virginia and New Mexico, where she had been expected to win. She still had a path to victory as of 10:30 p.m., but her so-called "blue wall" in long-Democratic northern states had dissipated in the face of what appeared to be a Trump wave.

Clinton and President Barack Obama had called for a comprehensive rejection of Trumpism — his disparagement of women and minority groups, his disdain for democratic norms, his rage. Instead, it appeared the best she could hope for was a squeaker of a victory.

Trump was dominant with rural and exurban white voters, compensating for a surge in Hispanic support in favour of Clinton. Win or lose, his competitiveness was a remarkable achievement for a candidate who has outraged much of the country.

To pull it off, Trump needed upset wins in states where he had long trailed — some combination of Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nevada and New Hampshire. His initial numbers in most of them looked better than most polls had forecast, with Michigan particularly worrisome for Clinton.

Mathematical models, crunching polling data, had given the former secretary of state, senator and first lady anywhere between a 70-per-cent and 99-per-cent chance of winning. By 9:30 p.m., the New York Times forecast was down to 50-50. By 10 p.m., the forecast gave Trump a 63-per-cent chance.

Clinton held her "victory" party at a New York City convention centre with a glass ceiling, a metaphor for the gender barrier she had hoped to break. But the mood in the mood turned glum fast.

"So this isn't fun," Jon Favreau, former speechwriter for President Barack Obama, wrote on Twitter.

Stock markets tanked on the early results; investors have made clear their preference for Clinton stability over Trump's promise of radical change.

But much of America rejected the global consensus. Trump, who was widely considered a laughingstock when he launched his candidacy with a rambling speech in June of last year, defied the odds and the pundits again, just as he said he would.

Trump thrilled millions of white voters with his outrage-courting refusal to be "politically correct," his vow to restore a bygone era of American glory, and scorched-earth attacks on elites, Muslims and immigration. The former reality television star managed to stay in the running despite an incessant stream of scandals, gaffes, lies and insults that would have sunk any traditional politician.

And he did so while running far fewer ads than Clinton. He was thriving on the strength of his persona and message alone. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Markets tumble as results pour in

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

Financial markets the world over were sent into free fall.

Early reports had the Dow Jones down nearly 700 points, or roughly three per cent. Stock markets across Asia Pacific also plunged, as investors reacted to Trump's tough talk on trade.

S&P 500 futures were down three per cent, mirroring the fall that happened in the days following the Brexit vote in the United Kingdom.

"Rightly or wrongly, markets are going to be concerned about a Trump victory, particularly given the potential consequences for world trade and its impact on many large companies in the U.S. stock market," said Ric Spooner, chief analyst at CMC Markets in Sydney.

The evening's biggest loser was the Mexican peso, which had been viewed as a market proxy for Trump's odds of winning. The Mexican currency plunged about 10 per cent to 20.20 pesos to the U.S. dollar – its lowest level in 20 years.

The steep and sudden decline in financial markets began when Trump started leading in the polls around 9 p.m. EST.

CHINA

Chinese state media outlets are casting the U.S. election as the embodiment of America's democracy in crisis in contrast to China's perceived stability under authoritarian rule.

The state-run Xinhua News Agency says the campaign has highlighted that, in its words, "the majority of Americans are rebelling against the U.S.'s political class and financial elites."

JAPAN

Japanese are tweeting about their interest in the U.S. election, and retweeting developments, though not everyone is happy. One Twitter user complains: "The U.S. presidential election is the only thing I can see on any channel!"

Several major television stations have suspended their regular morning programming to cover the vote, with a running tally of results and explanations of the U.S. electoral vote system.

Polling station drama on election day

VOTERS

Trump campaign already alleges violations

Long lines, malfunctioning machines, a Trump campaign lawsuit, allegations of voter harassment and a shooting that locked down two California polling stations — for American voters on Tuesday, an ugly and messy election season came to an ugly and messy end.

Fears of widespread election-day violence failed to materialize on Tuesday, though Californians endured a few tense hours after gunfire erupted near a polling station in Azusa, a city 40 kilometres east of Los Angeles.

The shooting forced the lockdown of two polling stations but police said late Tuesday that it was unrelated to the election and they still had no motive. The gunman and a male victim in his 70s were killed, with two other people injured; at least one of the victims was also on their way to vote, the Los Angeles Times reported.

But outside of Azusa, U.S. voters encountered more typical polling station dramas: long lineups, malfunctioning machines, assorted annoyances and isolated pockets of voter harassment.

The day did begin, however, with a Donald Trump trademark: a lawsuit. Early Tuesday, the Republican candidate's campaign filed a lawsuit in Nevada — one of several states that allows early voting — alleging that voters were allowed to cast their ballots past deadline last week.

In Nevada, people standing in line when the polls close at 8 p.m. are allowed to cast their ballots. The Trump campaign is alleging, however, that election officials violated state law by allowing people to join the line even after the cut off time.

The lawsuit — which was rejected quickly by a Nevada judge — was widely perceived as an attempt to suppress Hispanic voters in an important swing state. The polling station was located outside of a Mexican supermarket in Las Vegas, a Clinton stronghold.

While election day was largely peaceful, civil rights groups logged a high number of complaints from voters reporting harassment or suppression. As of early Tuesday evening, some 30,000 calls already had been received by a national voter complaint hotline; according to civil rights groups, a large proportion of them were from African-American and Latino voters.

According to Election Protection, an organization operating a hotline, voters complained about being directed to the wrong polling places, learning that their names had been purged from voter rolls, being wrongly told to fill out provisional ballots, and being improperly asked for identification or forced to wait in long lines. Voters in Florida's also reported people "using megaphones aggressively" and in Jacksonville, an "unauthorized individual" was also found inside a polling station, according to Kristen Clarke, president of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, during a press conference.

There were also reports in Hollywood, Fla., of "aggressive individuals hovering around" voters as the approached polling sites, she added. "Some have turned away because they did not feel able to freely cast (a) ballot."

A few skirmishes were also reported Tuesday.

In Michigan, authorities had to break up a shoving match between a Hillary Clinton supporter and another voter supporting Trump. WITH FILES FROM TORSTAR WIRE SERVICES

Clinton casts her vote

CAMPAIGN

Party to be held in symbolic venue with glass ceiling

She's delivered her closing pitch, concluded her final rally and cast her own vote.

By Tuesday afternoon, there was little left Hillary Clinton to do but wait, and prepare for word of whether she'd be picked as the first woman to serve as U.S. president.

Her campaign picked a suitably symbolic location for her Election Night party — the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center in New York City, which, in a nod to the historic moment, offers a glass ceiling. Casting her ballot at an elementary school near her home in suburban New York on Tuesday morning, the Democratic nominee acknowledged the weight of the day, saying: "so many people are counting on the outcome of this election."

It was a relatively calm Election Day compared with Clinton's hectic final few days day on the campaign trail. The former secretary of state and New York senator dashed through battleground states, encouraged get-out-the-vote efforts and campaigned with a star-studded cast of celebrity supporters.

The eve of the election included an emotional rally in Philadelphia with her husband, President Barack Obama and first lady Michelle Obama, as well as performances by Jon Bon Jovi and Bruce Springsteen. Lady Gaga capped it off by serenading thousands of supporters before the Clintons took the stage for a 1 a.m. rally in Raleigh, North Carolina.

After the divisive rhetoric of the campaign against Republican Donald Trump, Clinton sought to offer a positive closing message on Monday. She told supporters in Pittsburgh they "can vote for a hopeful, inclusive, bighearted America." In a buoyant mood, she also greeted voters who cried out "we love you," smiling back: "I love you all, too ... absolutely."

Some good news boosted Clinton's spirits in the final moments of the campaign. On Sunday, FBI Director James Comey sent a letter to Congress, informing lawmakers the bureau had found no evidence in its hurried review of newly discovered emails to warrant criminal charges against Clinton.

The late October announcement of a fresh email review rocked the race just as Clinton appeared to be pulling away from Trump in several battleground states. The update from the FBI may have come too late for some: In the nine days between Comey's initial statement until his "all clear" announcement on Sunday, nearly 24 million people cast early ballots. That's about 18 per cent of the expected total votes for president.

She also campaigned with Khizr Khan, the father of a slain U.S. Army officer whose indictment of Trump at the Democratic National Convention was an emotional high point for Clinton's party.

Trump shows trust issues as wife votes

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

If his behaviour at the polls was any indication, Donald Trump wasn't confident he had swayed the mind of the American electorate — or even his wife's for that matter.

A photo of Trump appearing to sneak a peek at Melania Trump's ballot became one of the final online memes of the Republican candidate's tumultuous campaign, and prompted some to wonder whether Trump's spouse was secretly a Hillary Clinton fan.

The couple voted Tuesday morning at a school in Manhattan. However, the photo-op backfired on Trump when social media users seized on the image of him glancing at his wife while she filled out her ballot.

Comedian Chelsea Handler — a Clinton supporter — shared the image on Twitter with the caption "when you're worried that your wife copied off Michelle again," a reference to Melania Trump's Republic convention speech that mirrored an earlier speech by First Lady Michelle Obama.

Handler's joke was retweeted over 23,000 times. Others shared the image with the hashtag #ImWithHer, suggesting Melania was voting for Clinton.

"When you trust your wife to vote for you, but not really" was another quip shared online with this photo.

Torontonians tune in as vote goes down

Just as Americans waited on pins and needles for Tuesday's election results, many Toronto politicos needed a drink to get them through the night's cocktail of excitement and dread.

Democrats Abroad brought together hundreds of expats for what, at times, was a tense night at Marché.

Others from all political stripes gathered at places ranging from the Drake Hotel to the U.S. Consulate General, parties that brought everything from Make America Great Again hats to life-sized cutouts of Hillary Clinton.

One Toronto hotel, which dubbed the election campaign "braggattrocious," was already packed as the first polling stations south of the border closed and a large television set screened the incoming numbers.

On hand was Elizabeth Littlejohn, a communications and new media professor, who had two sets of Kleenex with her:

"This little one is for if Hillary wins, and this big one is for if Trump wins," Littlejohn said.

Nearby, another crammed hotel pub selling $10-themed cocktails — Locker Room Talk and My Own Private Emails — was scrambling to accommodate everyone looking to watch.

Anne Leathers, a New Yorker in Toronto for work, said it blew her mind how many people were talking about the election in Canada.

"It's a bit like a reality TV show for everyone outside of America," Leathers said.

"I work for a British company and it's very much like that for them."

NEW YORK

Ottawa student surprised by lacklustre voter turnout

Ruth Tecle expected crowds of people heading to and from polling stations in upstate New York Tuesday.

Instead, when she and her Carleton journalism classmates rolled into Ogdensburg, N.Y., as part of a reporting assignment, the Scarborough native was struck by the absence of an election atmosphere.

"It doesn't look like it's election day outside," she said, noting there were more American flags — and even some Canadian ones — than candidate signs on local lawns.

"I think it says something about the current political climate. People here are not feeling strongly about either party."

> It's like these people are being forced to make a choice, but they'd rather not.
> Ruth Tecle

Journalism professor Allan Thompson, who experienced the U.S. election campaign this summer when he attended a Donald Trump rally in Phoenix, decided to take his class on a field trip to cover E-Day.

By Tuesday afternoon, Tecle had encountered Ogdensburg residents who, even at the 11th hour, were still unsure who to vote for.

Neither candidate campaigned in the area, and many voters were simply casting ballots for congress, she said.

Tecle said one man told her the vote "doesn't matter" because "one president cannot bring any change."

Others were nonplussed about voting because they felt the outcome was determined by more populous cities like New York City.

"It's really a big surprise," she said. "It's like these people are being forced to make a choice, but they'd rather not."

Paying to park at Toronto's malls

INFRASTRUCTURE

Environmental group says proceeds could pay for transit

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

The David Suzuki Foundation is taking the fight against climate change to the parking lot. And, there's a little extra green built into their plan for the city of Toronto.

The environmental nonprofit is launching a campaign this week with posters on subways and in other public spaces asking people to pressure the city to consider a parking levy at malls and other commercial spots. Supporters of the foundation will also start sending emails to Mayor John Tory and other city officials.

If the city buys into the idea, the levy would be charged to the owners of the parking lots, who, in turn, would decide whether the onus is on the retailers or drivers to pay the price.

At just $1.50/day per parking spot, the city could cash in more than $500 million a year, according to the foundation.

It's a sizable amount that can make an impact if invested in public transit, the foundation says.

"We're very concerned about climate change, air quality and improving public transit," said Gideon Forman, the foundation's analyst for climate change and transportation policy.

$500M

Annual revenue the city could earn from $1.50/day per parking spot, reports the foundation

> We're very concerned about climate change.
> Gideon Forman

"This is an opportunity to discourage people from using cars, which would reduce congestion and improve transit infrastructure."

Last year, Coun. Joe Mihevc floated a similar levy as a revenue tool for the city, arguing that moving ahead with the idea wouldn't even require changes to the City of Toronto Act or blessing from provincial authorities.

Other cities like Montreal and Melbourne are already levying the parking tax, Forman added.

Yorkdale Mall has more than 7,200 parking spots and could be among places targeted in a campaign to bring in city revenue. EDUARDO LIMA/METRO

City looks into 'safe exchange zones'

CRIME

Requesting the police board create sale sites on station lots

May Warren
Metro | Toronto

Coun. Norm Kelly wants to make your experience buying that used Ikea bookcase or selling your grandma's armchair a little more secure through "safe exchange zones."

The Scarborough-Agincourt councillor will bring a motion to council this week asking the Toronto Police Services Board to review the possibility of establishing zones in police station parking lots for the sale of goods from online sites such as Kijiji and Craigslist, or even bartering sites such as Bunz Trading Zone.

"You want to maximize security as much as possible," Kelly said, adding he would suggest six initial sites across the city.

Especially with the murder of Tim Bosma, the Hamilton man killed after meeting two men to test drive a truck he had advertised online, "there's a certain anxiety," about meeting strangers to buy and sell things, said the Ward 40 councillor.

Shawn McIntyre, communications manager at Kijiji, said the company fully supports the idea and is willing to support it through paying for the cost of signs to mark safe zones.

Several other cities — stretching from Kingston to Windsor — are already doing something similar. Last week, the Peel Regional Police became the first in the GTA to jump on board.

"Over the past couple of years there's been, on average, 20 violent crimes in relation to buying and selling over the Internet, " said Peel Region Sgt. Josh Colley. "So the initiative was to come up with something that would reduce these violent crimes."

Police don't monitor the trades, he said, but the zones are meant to serve as a deterrent to crime as cameras are in the area.

Toronto police Const. Victor Kwong said the service has no plans to establish safe zones but would implement whatever the police services board decided.

He said numbers for assaults connected to online exchanges are not readily available.

REAL ESTATE

Ontario to combat rising house prices

Finance Minister Charles Sousa spoke on how housing affordability is effecting first-time buyers. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Ontario will take steps next week to deal with rising house prices in the Toronto area, but it will not follow British Columbia's lead and impose a tax on foreign buyers.

Finance Minister Charles Sousa said Tuesday that "something must be done" to deal with soaring home prices in Toronto, especially for first-time buyers who find it near impossible to save a big enough down payment to enter the market.

"We recognize that more has to be done in order to enable those in the Greater Toronto Area and Greater Golden Horseshoe to accommodate some of the rising price points of homes, and we know that it's becoming more difficult for first-time homebuyers, so we're looking at ways to address it," he said.

Sousa told the Canadian Club Toronto he needs more data on the impact of B.C.'s foreign buyer's tax in Vancouver and more information on the Toronto market, and doesn't want to do anything that would adversely affect neighbouring real estate markets.

"The market mix is different than it is in British Columbia, so we want to take the appropriate steps to address the matter without then negatively impacting other regions around the GTA," he said. "We have to determine what the degree of foreign investment is, what degree of vacancies are occurring, to what degree there is speculation going on and flipping of properties."

In the Greater Toronto Area, a record 9,768 properties were sold last month — up 11.5 per cent year-over-year — even as prices jumped 21 per cent from the same month in 2015.

Sousa will outline Ontario's plan to address housing affordability in the fall economic statement. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Cameras returning to school zones, Wynne reveals

Photo radar is speeding back to Ontario.

After a formal request from Toronto Mayor John Tory, Premier Kathleen Wynne announced new legislation empowering municipalities to install safety cameras near schools, as a way to curb speeding and protect pedestrians and cyclists.

"We have seen too many injuries and deaths caused by drivers who speed and endanger people's lives," Wynne said Tuesday in Ottawa, where she was campaigning for the Nov. 17 Ottawa-Vanier byelection.

"Our intent is to give municipalities more tools to help keep people safe on our roads," the premier said, emphasizing the cameras would not be placed on provincial highways as they briefly were — amid political controversy — in 1994-95.

"We are doing this ... because we know it will make it safer for kids ... and because municipalities have asked us to work with them."

Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson said "this is great news" because it will make streets safer and free up police officers from manning radar guns to do more pressing work.

Watson predicted "speeders will be penalized with a heavy fine and potentially some demerit points" though details such as penalties have not yet been finalized because the legislation hasn't been tabled.

All revenue from the tickets will go to municipalities, who would have more power to improve safety in school zones.

Under the legislation, towns and cities will be able to:

- Use cameras to take photos of speeders' licence plates and mail the vehicle plate holder a ticket.
- Introduce additional reduced speed-limit zones to decrease collisions between vehicles and pedestrians.
- Install more red-light cameras to make intersections safer.

In February, Tory asked Wynne to amend provincial laws to allow photo radar in Toronto.

On Tuesday, the mayor said he was "gratified" by a promised change that could save children's lives.

"I would certainly want to (move) very quickly on this," Tory told reporters at city hall, adding he hopes Toronto school-zone speeders are being nabbed by photo radar "early in the new year."

> We are doing this because we know it will make it safer for kids.
> Kathleen Wynne

"We've seen a lot of problems this year, tragic problems, with the safety of all pedestrians young and old."

The mayor's push for the change was significant because it was former Progressive Conservative premier Mike Harris who scrapped photo radar in 1995, less than a year after NDP premier Bob Rae introduced it to Ontario highways.

Tory, a former Conservative leader, noted times have changed since the era when photo radar was derided as a cash grab. Indeed, both PC Leader Patrick Brown and NDP Leader Andrea Horwath have said they'd welcome safety cameras, suggesting photo radar is no longer the political hot button it was two decades ago.

"It was the Progressive Conservatives that got rid of photo radar, so there is some hesitation toward that, but ... the reality is municipalities are desperately looking at new revenue mechanisms because of underfunding," Brown said in February.

Horwath said "it's actually time to have a new look" at the measure, given the attitudinal and technological changes.

Bold plan to get downtown moving

A new report from city staff has big suggestions for making it easier to get around downtown, whether you're on foot, transit, two wheels or four. The ideas outlined in TOCore will go to the Toronto and East York Community Council next week before heading to city council in December. Here's a look at five key takeaways.

MAY WARREN/METRO

1 Add cycling routes, bike parking

The report recommends adding cycling routes downtown along key corridors such as Wellington Street or University Avenue that would build on the city's 10-year cycling plan. It also recommends adding bike parking and expanding the Bike Share program downtown.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

2 Make King Street transit priority

The 504 route, one of the busiest in the city, carries, on average, more than 65,000 riders each, according to the report. But new developments mean more pedestrian traffic, increased ridership and lots of delays in traffic. A pilot project will explore options such as a dedicated lane for the streetcar.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

3 Activate laneways

The city's laneways are an untapped resource that can provide more walking routes, the report says. Toronto should follow the lead of cities like Melbourne, Australia, and Vancouver that have transformed laneways from dead space into public areas part of the pedestrian network.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

4 Create a more walkable downtown

The report recommends creating a "pedestrian priority network" to find ways to improve the pedestrian experience downtown, such as wider sidewalks and better lighting and seating. It also recommends improving pedestrian wayfinding signs in the core and continuing to work towards making downtown intersections safer, in line with the road safety plan.

LIZ BEDDALL/METRO

EDUARDO LIMA/METRO

5 Expand the path

Toronto's underground network of walking tunnels should be expanded and connections should be improved, the report says, so more people can walk around downtown in cold and extreme weather.

It's Toronto the Reputable

Toronto is getting some love from this year's Reputation Institute rankings, which placed the city fourth worldwide and the best in Canada. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

Hogtown ranks high in global survey

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

Add "reputable" to the list of Toronto's adjectives.

According to results of a global survey conducted every year by the Reputation Institute, Toronto is the fourth most reputable city in the world, ranking only behind Sydney, Vienna and Zurich.

The research — which grades cities based on people's perception of a city's government, environment and economy — ranks Toronto as the best city to live in this year.

Hogtown comes in second as a place to do business, and third overall as a place to invest, behind Zurich and Tokyo.

Montreal and Vancouver placed seventh and ninth respectively, marking the first time a country has had three cities in the Top 10. No U.S. city was reputable enough to rank among the 10 best.

Toronto can attribute its jump in the rankings (the city ranked 26th in last year's results) to a change in municipal leadership and events like the Pan Am Games, which helped boost the city's global profile, said Daniel Tisch, president and CEO of Argyle Public Relations, a partner with Reputation Institute.

However, Toronto still underperformed as a destination, failing to crack the survey's list of Top 10 cities for tourism.

"Competition is always very tight but Toronto could do better in improving its image as an ideal place to visit," Tisch said, adding that hosting more world events like the Pan Am Games could help boost the city's reputation.

TRANSIT

Council nixes delay over SmartTrack

Mayor John Tory's signature rail plan cleared a major hurdle on Tuesday, as council rejected an attempt to delay its approval and endorsed a controversial agreement with the province to advance its completion.

The terms of the agreement, which passed with the support of three quarters of council, set out cost-sharing arrangements between the city and the Ontario government for more than $11 billion worth of transit projects, including planned LRT lines and a scaled down version of the SmartTrack proposal Tory promised during the campaign.

The mayor framed the agreement as council taking decisive action on building transit.

"I think it's a great deal. It's going to produce transit for people sooner than anything else, it's going to make the biggest difference the soonest of anything else we can do," he told council before the vote.

The decision means the city will be responsible for the capital costs of building SmartTrack, estimated at $3.7 billion, and comes just three weeks before a Nov. 30 deadline set by the province.

SmartTrack is dependent on the province's GO Transit regional express rail (RER) initiative, and Metrolinx, the provincial transit agency, said it needed council's commitment to paying SmartTrack costs by the end of the month so it could move ahead with the procurement process for RER.

But during a debate that stretched over nine hours, some councillors said they didn't have enough information to approve the proposed agreement. Details of the terms were only released last week and the deal potentially puts the city on the hook for billions of dollars in future transit costs with no clear funding source.

Councillor Janet Davis (Ward 31, Beaches-East York), moved a motion to defer approval of the agreement until council's February meeting, when councillors will finalize the city's 2017 budget. She argued that would allow council to weigh in on city reports, anticipated in the coming weeks, that will outline new revenue tools and potential asset sales that could raise funding for transit.

Exposure to Ebola virus feared in Winnipeg lab

DISEASE

Lab worker found split in body suit, now in isolation

An employee at the National Centre for Foreign Animal Disease may have been exposed to the Ebola virus.

Dr. John Copps says the employee was working with six infected pigs Monday and noticed a split in the seam of his protective suit during decontamination after working in the Level 4 lab in Winnipeg.

The lab director said all proper emergency procedures were followed and the risk to the employee, co-workers and the community is considered to be low.

"Our employees are well aware of the risks and how to control them," Copps said Tuesday.

Officials said there was no contact with other workers before the employee realized the risk of possible infection. The employee met with a doctor and was offered an experimental Ebola vaccine. Officials, citing privacy, wouldn't say whether he received the vaccine.

The employee is in isolation and will be monitored for 21 days by local health officials.

Copps said a pig had been given a drug called interferon and then infected with Ebola to see if the drug would affect the outcome of the disease.

All the pigs had been anesthetized and were being moved by the employee at the time, he said.

Ebola is spread through direct contact with the blood, sweat, vomit, feces, urine, saliva or semen of those infected or of corpses. The virus is not airborne. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trudeau to retrace father's footsteps

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau will retrace some of his father's most historic footsteps next week when he travels to Cuba and quite possibly meets an old family friend — retired Cuban leader Fidel Castro.

Officially, Trudeau will meet with Cuban President Raul Castro. Cuba's ambassador to Canada says there may also be an opportunity to visit with Fidel Castro too.

"I think this question has been worked out, and there is a chance. I don't know how it will end," ambassador Julio Garmendia Pena said Monday.

"I'm sure Fidel would like to meet him, and it would be a great opportunity for him to say hello to a friend of his father, and for Fidel to greet his closest friend's son as a prime minister."

Pierre Trudeau became the first NATO leader to visit Cuba when he touched down on Jan. 26, 1976 with his wife Margaret, and his then four-month-old son Michel in tow. THE CANADIAN PRESS

REMEMBRANCE

Sacrifices of native vets honoured

Indigenous people across Canada remembered ancestors and community members who fought and died in war as they marked National Aboriginal Veterans Day on Tuesday.

More than 12,000 indigenous people joined the Canadian military in the First and Second World Wars and Korea. More than 500 were killed and countless more were injured.

Veterans Affairs Minister Kent Hehr said more indigenous people served in those conflicts than any other ethnic group, as a percentage of total population.

Of the Canadian military's 95,000 full- and part-time service members, more than 2,500 are indigenous people.

National Aboriginal Veterans Day has grown since it was inaugurated by Winnipeg's city council in 1994, with commemorations across the country each year.

Richard Blackwolf, president of the Canadian Aboriginal Veterans and Serving Members Association, says his group plans to ask the federal government to proclaim Nov. 8 as National Aboriginal Veterans Day. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Street collapses in Japanese city core

A sinkhole in the middle of the business district in Fukuoka on Tuesday.
SADAYUKI GOTO/KYODO NEWS VIA THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DISASTER

Officials fear sinkhole could affect nearby structures

> An accident like this is unheard of, one that should not have happened. We must prevent secondary accidents.
> Mayor Soichiro Takashima

Parts of a main street collapsed in the heart of a major city in southern Japan on Tuesday, creating a massive sinkhole and cutting off power, water and gas supplies to parts of the city.

Authorities said no injuries were reported from the pre-sunrise collapse in downtown Fukuoka, which created a sinkhole more than half the size of an Olympic pool in the middle of the business district.

The cause of the collapse is under investigation, Fukuoka officials said, but they linked it to ongoing subway construction nearby. A smaller sinkhole occurred in Fukuoka in 2014 at another location of the subway construction.

Fukuoka, a city of more than 1.5 million people, is about 1,000 kilometres southwest of Tokyo. The massive cave-in appeared in the city's bustling Hakata district, a major business and entertainment centre, with muddy underground water flowing into the hole.

The incident prompted the evacuation of some residents in nearby buildings. Officials were concerned that further erosion inside the sinkhole could prompt nearby structures to collapse.

"An accident like this is unheard of, one that should not have happened," Fukuoka Mayor Soichiro Takashima said. "We must prevent secondary accidents, and will do our utmost to restore important infrastructure."

CLIMATE CHANGE

Last five years ruled hottest ever

Hot and wild and with an "increasingly visible human footprint" — that's how the UN weather agency sums up the global climate in the past five years.

In a report released Tuesday at international climate talks in Morocco, the World Meteorological Organization said 2011-2015 was the hottest five-year period on record.

That comes as no surprise as WMO's annual reports have showed record average temperatures in 2014 and 2015. But the agency said the five-year report provides a better overview of warming trends and extreme events such as prolonged droughts and recurrent heat waves.

"We just had the hottest five-year period on record, with 2015 claiming the title of hottest individual year. Even that record is likely to be beaten in 2016," said WMO Secretary-General Petteri Taalas.

IRAQ

Investigators dig into mass grave

The stench of death drew Iraqi soldiers to the unsettled plot of land freshly liberated from Daesh fighters.

When a bulldozer scraped the ground, bones poked from just beneath the surface, along with clothing scraps, garbage bags, human remains swarming with flies — and even a child's stuffed animal.

About 100 bodies, many of them decapitated, are suspected to be buried in what is likely the latest mass grave left by the retreating jihadis, officials said.

Investigators on Tuesday began their probe of the site, located near an agricultural school in the town of Hamam al-Alil.

The gruesome discovery by troops advancing on militant-held Mosul fits a pattern in territory retaken from Daesh.

Words of hope for America

This is the image Metro's cartoonist drew to sum up her feelings about the campaign. Here's what she had to say.

I did this cartoon thinking about what I believe the priority should be when choosing a government: People's well-being. Us humans should take care of each other. We should be fair. We should be together. The United States is the most influential country in the world, and whatever happens there will trickle down to the rest of the planet. That's why my wish for them is that hope and love can prevail, and that they stay strong and work hard on the creation of a happier country. That in turn will help create a happier and healthier world.

5 tips for achieving work-life balance

If the term "sandwich generation" is all too familiar for you, then you know the challenge it can be juggling your interests with the demands of caring for both older parents and young children.

Achieve a balance between the personal and professional with these quick tips that'll have you acing that big project at work, making it to your kid's dance recital, and spending quality time with your parents.

Don't forget your health

When you're feeling stretched too thin, one of the first things you neglect is probably your health.

"This is a big mistake," says Suzane Andrade, registered nurse at EMD Serono. "Not only do proper sleep, nutrition, and exercise help you have enough energy, they also prevent you from being sidelined by illness." Andrade points out that keeping yourself healthy is also important for maintaining the health of aging parents and young children, who are more at risk of complications from colds and flu.

Use the latest apps

Let technology work for you. There's an app for whatever you need help with in work and life — whether that's managing a health condition, scheduling appointments, or grocery shopping.

Rethink basic errands

If you're the one shuffling aging parents to appointments, taking the kids to soccer practice, and picking up the groceries, consider how you can make your life easier.

Organize carpools for after-school activities and look into grocery delivery options — think outside the box for creative solutions.

Double down

Too many commitments? Pair items on your to-do list for maximum efficiency and down time for yourself. Date night with your partner could be cooking an interesting new meal at home (with plenty of leftovers for weekday lunches).

Plan fun weekend activities that your parents and kids can enjoy together.

Schedule time for non-work activities

Most people pay special attention to scheduling work tasks and meetings. Do the same with leisure activities.

Make appointments for fun, date night, and personal time like you would for a business meeting — you'll feel healthier and happier and be more productive at work by ensuring you can keep your appointment with the gym.

How to get your kids to manage their finances

MONEY MATTERS

Help set your kids up for financial independence

If your kids are young adults attending postsecondary or starting their first foray into the working world and you're still doing their taxes and helping with finances, you're not alone.

Many parents (and kids) have trouble cutting the cord, especially when it comes to money matters. Fortunately, there are ways to help set them up for financial success and independence.

Make time for teaching

Don't discount this obvious tip — many parents neglect teaching the basics of personal finance because it's just easier to do it themselves, while kids are often too happy to remain blissfully ignorant.

Educate your children on how to make a monthly budget, calculate regular expenses and auto insurance. Teach by example, and break down how you do this with your own money. Ask a relative or friend to do this if you think it would be better coming from them.

Speak with a financial planner

A financial planner can help your young adult find the best place to keep their money, like a Tax-Free Savings Account or Registered Education Savings Plan if they're planning on further schooling.

Earn a bit of interest on your student loans by keeping the money in a high-interest savings account. It's also never too early to start planning for financial goals like paying off student loans and saving for bigger expenses like a first home down payment.

Master online banking together

Online banking is the perfect way for young adults to take control of their finances because they can do it from their laptops and smartphones, spaces they're already very comfortable with. Get them to take charge of their taxes by signing up for direct deposit for their income tax refund, GST/HST credit, and other tax-related payments.

It's the fastest, safest, and greenest way to get their payments. This way, if they decide to move or travel with their newfound economic freedom, they'll still have access to their money and you can forget about mailing them their payments.

Sign up for direct deposit by visiting your financial institution or go to directdeposit.gc.ca for more information.

Prince Harry calls out racism

ROYAL FAMILY

Scrutiny of relationship compared to Princess Diana

Prince Harry condemned the media for subjecting girlfriend Meghan Markle to "a wave of abuse and harassment," issuing a highly unusual statement Tuesday that confirmed his relationship with the American actress and expressed concern for her safety.

Harry's office said that while the 32-year-old prince understood that there was significant curiosity about his private life, a line had been crossed in terms of media intrusion. Harry said the statement was issued in hopes media driving the story will "pause."

"Prince Harry is worried about Ms. Markle's safety and is deeply disappointed that he has not been able to protect her," said the statement from Kensington Palace. "It is not right that a few months into a relationship with him that Ms. Markle should be subjected to such a storm."

The 35-year-old Markle is best known for playing paralegal Rachel Zane in the TV legal drama Suits. She has also worked with the United Nations on gender equality and is a global ambassador for the charity World Vision Canada, travelling to Rwanda earlier this year to campaign for clean water.

Tabloids in Britain and beyond have jumped on the story and speculated about the relationship for weeks, with many commenting on her mixed-race heritage and contrasting her background with the prince's. The palace said the harassment has "been very public — the smear on the front page of a national newspaper; the racial undertones of comment pieces; and the outright sexism and racism of social media trolls and web article comments."

One Daily Mail headline called her a "saucy divorcee." Another described her ancestors as "a tailor, a teacher and a cleaner in racially-divided Jim Crow South — while his were ruling the British Empire." One Daily Mirror article linked Markle with an online pornography site, saying clips of her from Suits were featured on an adult site.

Harry said the commentators will say this is "the price she has to pay" and that "this is all part of the game."

"This is not a game — it is her life and his."

Statement issued by Prince Harry's office

The palace said that Harry "strongly disagrees."

"This is not a game — it is her life and his," the statement said.

The scrutiny of the relationship drew immediate parallels to the media scrutiny of Harry's mother, the late Princess Diana, who died in a 1997 car accident while being pursued by paparazzi. It also invited comparisons to the early revelations that Kate Middleton was dating Prince William. That relationship was also the subject of relentless media attention.

But choosing to tackle the issue directly is unusual for the palace, which initially declined comment to reports in the Sunday Express newspaper on the relationship, as per its usual policy of refraining from discussions on the personal lives of the royal family.

"It's a very unusual step, I can't think of a precedent for it in recent years," said Joe Little, managing editor of Majesty magazine. "Some would regard this is something he should put up with, but that's not in his nature." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Angelina Jolie Pitt has sole custody of six kids. AP

DIVORCE

Pitt-Jolie children will remain in actress' care

Angelina Jolie Pitt will continue to have sole custody of her six children with Brad Pitt in a joint agreement reached by the actors, a representative for the actress said Monday.

The voluntary agreement calls for the former couple's six children, who range in ages from eight to 15, to continue to have "therapeutic visits" with Pitt for the time being. It is unclear what therapeutic visits entailed, and Jolie Pitt's representatives could not provide additional details.

A representative for Pitt declined comment.

Monday's statement said the agreement was reached more than a week ago, although Pitt told a court on Friday that he is seeking joint custody.

Jolie Pitt filed for divorce in September, days after Pitt was involved in a disturbance during a private flight with his family. She cited irreconcilable differences as the reason for the breakup, and an attorney said at the time she filed for divorce "for the health of the family."

The agreement has not been filed in the couple's divorce, and may not be the final custody arrangement governing the actors' children.

Pitt and Jolie Pitt reached a temporary custody agreement in late September that included at least some of the same terms — visitation with his children and both sides agreeing to meetings with therapists.

"We believe that all sides are committed to healing the family and ask for your consideration during this difficult time," Monday's statement said.

The actor filed a legal response to the divorce on Friday and sought joint custody of the children. Formal custody arrangements are included in a couple's divorce judgment, although they are rarely made public in celebrity divorce cases.

Pitt's filing did not include any new details about the couple's breakup. Pitt cited irreconcilable differences and makes no mention of a prenuptial agreement that will govern how the pair divides their assets. He also cites Sept. 15 as the day of their separation, one day after the alleged plane altercation between Pitt and his 15-year-old son, Maddox.

Pitt was accused of being abusive toward the teenager, sources told The Associated Press, but authorities were not notified when the plane landed in Minnesota. Several sources said the incident was being investigated by the Los Angeles County Department of Children and Family Services, but the agency said it could not confirm whether it was involved.

Ayesha Curry is an all-star in the kitchen

COOKBOOK

NBA husband has come a long way as a cook, Curry says

Ayesha Curry recounts her early childhood years growing up in Markham, Ont. in her new cookbook, The Seasoned Life.
MICHELLE SIU/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ayesha Curry and her NBA superstar husband Stephen Curry call California home, but her exposure to ethnically diverse foods while growing up in Canada helped fuel her lifelong love of cooking.

In her new cookbook, The Seasoned Life (Little, Brown and Company), Curry recounts her early childhood years in Markham, Ont., just north of Toronto, where she would watch her babysitter make Trinidadian curry and roti for clients in her mom's basement salon.

As a child of Jamaican, Chinese, Polish and African-American heritage — referred to as "The United Nations" by her classmates — Curry felt right at home with the expansive array of culinary options on her doorstep, including neighbourhood eateries featuring Indian, Ethiopian and Greek cuisines.

"I lived here until I was 14 years old, and then moved to North Carolina, and that was a big culture shock for me," she said in a recent interview at a downtown Toronto bookstore.

"I was just starting high school, and the lifestyle is very, very different there, so I was able to see different worlds. But growing up here, it's such a melting pot of people and culture and food, and even the style of how food is made here is different. I feel like having both worlds let me see the difference and let me see what I wanted to pick and choose from each place."

The mash-up of culinary influences is threaded throughout The Seasoned Life. In addition to light-hearted stories and photos, the book showcases recipes influenced by Curry's cultural upbringing, from her Jamaican grandmother's escovitch fish dish with sweet and sour sauce, to a twist on chicken soup featuring fried dumplings.

The Seasoned Life also features a five-ingredient pasta recipe including bell peppers and pancetta from Curry's husband Stephen, the reigning NBA MVP and star point guard for the Golden State Warriors. (Curry made waves Tuesday night when he dropped 13 three-pointers against the New Orleans Pelicans, finishing the game with 46 points. He also owns the record for most threes in a single season, having dropped 402 treys last season). While Stephen is much more adventurous now in his culinary choices, he has had a few kitchen misadventures.

She shares a few fun anecdotes about the basketball star, including trying to pass off store-bought chai lattes as homemade, and serving her over-salted Cream of Wheat with a burned bagel and eggs scrambled to a crisp.

"I don't want to give him too much credit, but he can cook a nice meal these days, which is awesome," said Curry, adding that he has prepared the steak dish and bananas Foster dessert recipe from her book.

"Just as a matter of broadening his palate, he's surpassed that. He'll try anything and it's really cool that he's done that. He's definitely done it for me, because if it was up to him, I don't think he would have had anything other than, like, pizza and chicken Parmesan."

Curry is a big advocate of meal prep, and does so with her athlete husband in mind when whipping up a quick dish.

"I'll do a super-grain in there, I'll do some sort of potato whether it's a white potato, a sweet potato or some sort of other veggie, and some grilled chicken or a lean fish," she said.

"Put everything on a roasting pan and put everything into the oven. It's one of those 'set it and forget it' type of things."

The Currys are parents to daughters Riley, 4, and one-year-old Ryan. Ayesha devotes a chapter to "cooking with the littles" where she shares kid-friendly recipes and includes tips on how to encourage youngsters to be involved in food preparation. She recalled doing the same as a young girl helping her parents and grandmother as they cooked.

"Taking a cup of flour and putting it into a bowl with them or for them gave me that little bit of confidence — even though I wasn't really doing much. And I feel like it's something you take with you into adulthood.

"I feel like if you instil it in from a young age, you can shape and mould your child to grow up with that love of food or that sense of independence to be able to want to tackle making themselves a meal." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Red velvet has made a big comeback. The dramatic red colour of store-bought cakes and cupcakes comes from food colouring, and they're topped with cream cheese frosting. The large amount of oil, eggs, butter and cream cheese make this a delicious indulgence, but also a nutritional disaster. This slice of cake contains half your daily calories and fat, as well as the equivalent of 17 tsp of sugar! Believe it or not, a chocolate chip muffin has over half the calories, fat and sugar.

Ceviche seller claims it's 'sharing economy'

A California single mom could go to jail for selling ceviche on Facebook. MARIZA RUELAS' GOFUNDME PAGE

A defence attorney in California says his client doesn't deserve criminal charges for taking orders through Facebook to sell homemade ceviche.

San Joaquin County Deputy Public Defender Benjamin Hall said Monday that his client is part of a new, shared economy that's evolving through social media.

Prosecutors say Stockton resident Mariza Ruelas — a single mother of six — could spend up to one year in jail for using a Facebook forum to sell specialty dishes.

Hall said his client used a hobby to create community and bring people together around food.

Kelly Daniel of the local prosecutor's office, however, says Ruelas' enterprise was more than a hobby.

Daniel says she lacked the proper business license and health inspections that protect people from serious illness and even death. Prosecutors offered Ruelas 80 hours of community service to settle the case — which she's refused.

The mother of six children says on a gofundme website she created that she never dreamed a weekend hobby with her daughters could turn out so badly.

Ruelas and her public defender could not be immediately reached by for comment.

Brand ambassador spreading word and wine

When it comes to listing dream jobs, being a brand ambassador for a winery is close to the top. Who wouldn't want to travel the globe hosting tastings and talking up the juice?

Rocio Osborne lives that kind of life. A sixth-generation member of Spain's Osborne vino dynasty, her passport gets more use than a corkscrew at a wine bar. Over dinner last week Rocio shared stories of her family's long history and how they turned Rioja's Bodegas Montecillo, a winery acquired more than 40 years ago, into one of the wine world's most recognized brands.

The 2011 Crianza ($13.10-$17.99) is made with 90 per cent Tempranillo aged in oak barrels for 18 months. Its balanced, jammy red fruit is incredibly food-friendly, making it a wine to keep in mind for holiday meal pairing. *Prices reflect range across the country. Maple Glazed Ribs extend BBQ season

CULINARY COMPETITION

A recipe by the Quebec team competing in food Olympics

Starting today, Team Canada heads down to Orange Beach, Ala. to compete in the World Food Championships — the Olympics of the culinary world — for a high-stakes showdown.

Representing Eastern Canada is Team Skara Old School BBQ, including pitmasters Manny Mavroudis and Dave Wharry, who provided the recipe we are printing here.

"If you don't have a smoker you can make these on a gas grill using the 'indirect' method, which means basically put two burners on low and turn off the middle burner," said Wharry.

With unseasonably warm weather across the country, extend barbecue season with this nod to Quebecois tradition.

'I TRIED IT'

Up-marché Pockets lack nuance

Ariel Teplitsky
Torstar News Service

McCain Foods momentarily shocked and scandalized the nation this summer when rumour spread that its beloved Pizza Pockets were being discontinued. Memories of late-night college cravings, of cringe-worthy '90s commercials, of cheap, piping hot puffs of goo-filled microwaved dough were on the verge of being scraped into the green bin of history.

Alas, the alarm was premature. McCain's frozen balls of adolescent joy weren't going extinct. They were going upmarket — up-marché, rather — dressing their best and standing on their tippy toes.

Relaunched this fall as part of its new line of stuffed pastries, Pizza Pockets seem to want to be taken more seriously, to reach an older crowd with deeper, um, pockets (pockets full of nostalgia, surely). Check out the country-kitchen aesthetic on the new packaging. Behold the pocket's oblong shape, with three parallel grooves — from a chef's blade, presumably — across the top, like a miniature baguette. This is some fine-looking snack food.

McCain targets an older crowd with new Pizza Pockets. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

But what anyone who has bought these before will notice most of all is that the box, still roughly the same size as before, now contains only two pockets instead of four. And while the buns are a bit bigger, the total weight of one box is just 260 grams, down from 400. Consumers are paying a similar price (about $4 a box) for considerably less food.

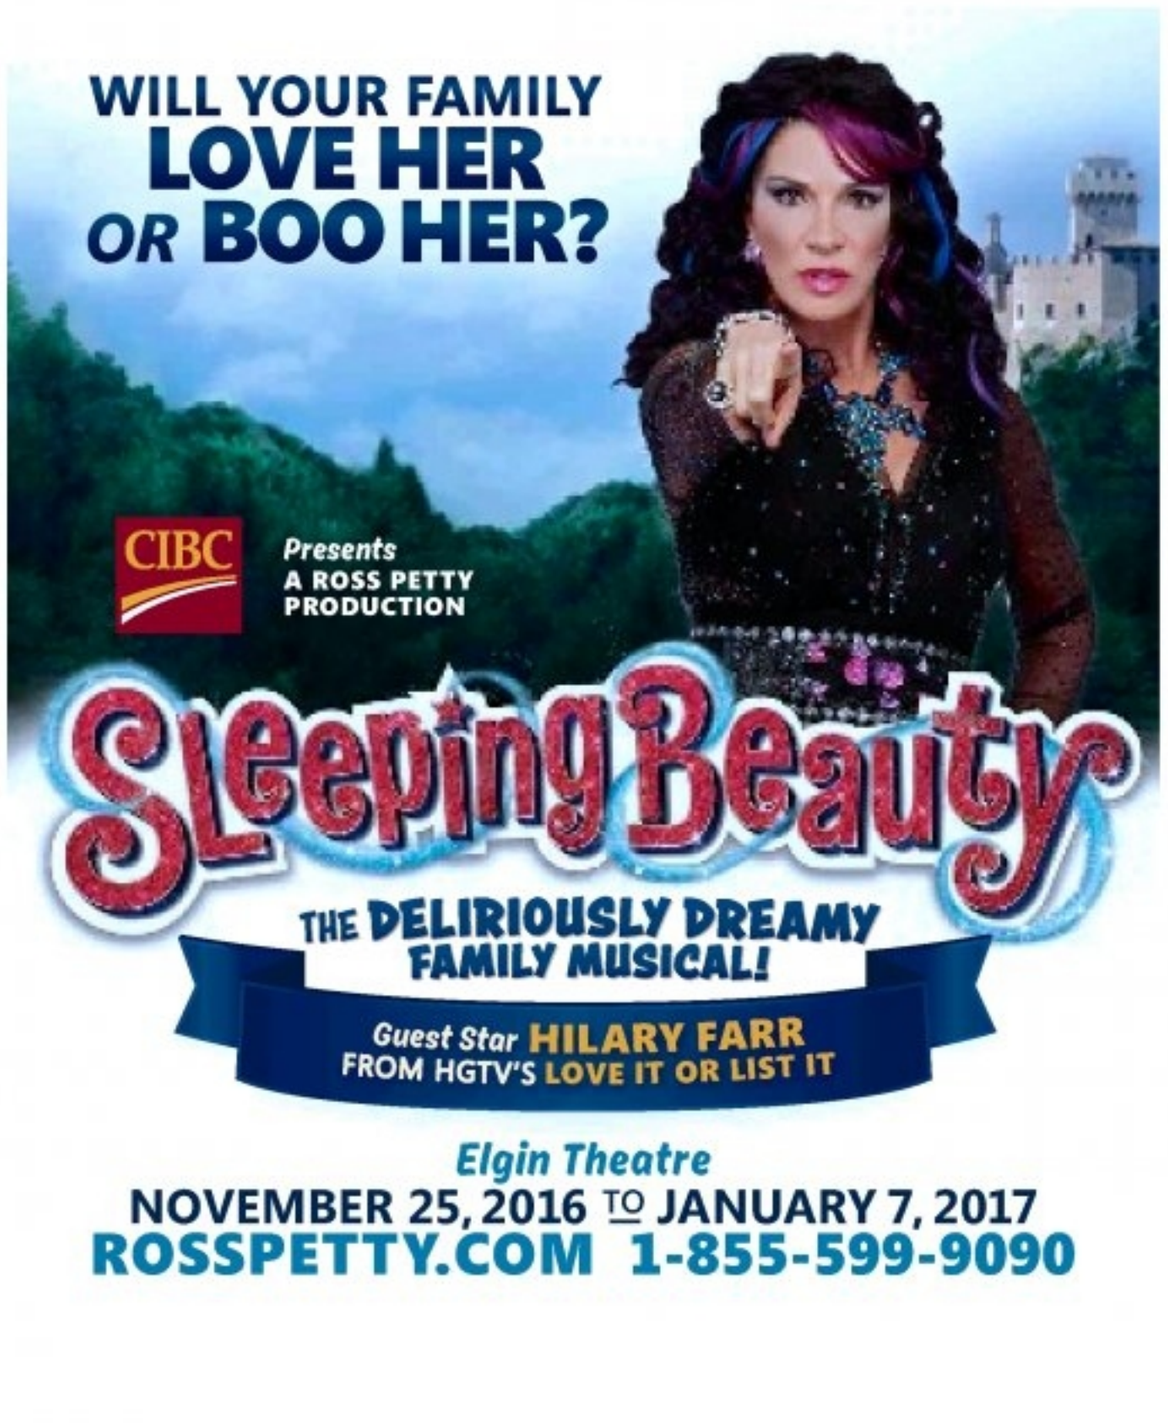
But are the pockets better than before? McCain assures us the recipe is unchanged, despite those baker-ly flourishes.

Now many years removed from my college days, I haven't had an excuse to warm up a pizza pocket in a long time, but the taste is a more recent memory for several members of our panel.

I took a bite of a "deluxe" pocket, expecting it to ooze deliciously like it does in the picture. The dough is nice and soft, but the inside is a rather mushy mound of salt and fat. It tastes pizza-esque, with the basics of cheese, pepperoni and tomato sauce, perhaps garlic, but in your mouth it's hard to differentiate the flavours. I could tell there was cheese in my "deluxe" pie because it stuck to my teeth, but I had to read the ingredients to learn there were also mushrooms and green and red peppers.

Still, lack of nuance is unlikely to deter today's youth from eating these. What might scare them off is the price — or if they happen to come across those '90s-era TV ads on YouTube. They are just as embarrassing as you remember.

Would I eat it again? I won't avoid them. But unless I start aging backwards and return to high school, it seems unlikely.



Bring on the 'Citrus of the North'

RECIPE

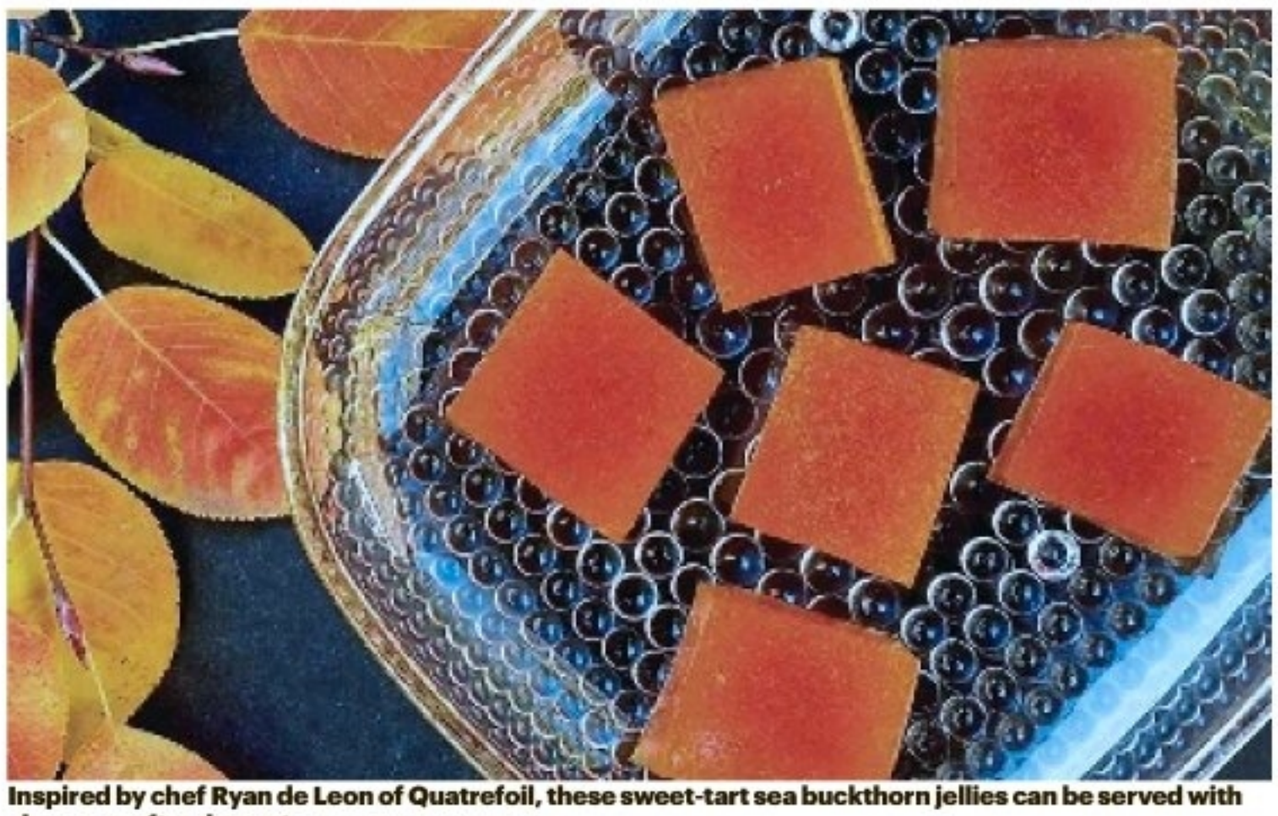
Sea buckthorn berries packed with loads of vitamins and antioxidants

Whether harvested in Siberia or Teesdale, Ontario, sea buckthorn berries pack a powerful punch.

"It's like grapefruit on steroids," says Paul Sawtell, whose 100km Foods distributes the glowing orange berries to a growing number of chefs.

"They're super unique and available frozen year-round," says Sawtell, whose sales have jumped from $550 to $10,000 in three years.

The "Citrus of the North" is off the charts in Vitamins A and C (eat just eight berries a day!) and rich in antioxidants and Omega fatty acids.



Inspired by chef Ryan de Leon of Quatrefoil, these sweet-tart sea buckthorn jellies can be served with cheese or after dessert. TOSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Buy & Store

- Look for frozen sea buckthorn berries at stores that cater to Eastern Europeans.
- Quebec distributor Atelier No16 (atelierno16.com) ships 2-kg bags of frozen berries from Ferme les Petites Ecores, which also makes a scrumptious sea buckthorn-apple butter.
- Natural food stores carry sea buckthorn capsules, juice and cosmetics.
- If using as a garnish, keep berries frozen until just before use as they soften quickly.

Prep

- This super-tart berry requires sweetening. Think honey, maple syrup or loads of white sugar.
- The hard flat seeds can also be a problem. You hardly notice them in the whole berries, but if using in jam or sauces it's best to strain them out and discard.
- After juicing the berries, chef Sandra Rae dries and grinds the pulp for meatballs, granola, quick breads and muffins.

Serve

- Use sea buckthorn berries instead of lemon in marinades and vinaigrettes.
Add pectin to make jams and jellies.
- To tame their tartness, preserve whole berries in honey or maple syrup and spoon over yogurt and granola.
- The berries pair well with duck, pork, chicken and fish.
- Rae marinates salmon for an hour in crushed berries, bakes the fish and finishes it with a maple-butter glaze and a few whole berries.
- Hibiscus Café in Kensington Market makes a very popular sea buckthorn ice cream.
- For smoothies, drop 1/4 cup (60 mL) stemmed whole berries into the blender with 1/4 cup (60 mL) water and buzz to break up seeds before adding remaining ingredients.

SEA BUCKTHORN JELLIES

Inspired by chef Ryan de Leon of Quatrefoil, these sweet-tart jellies can be served with cheese or after dessert.

2 cups (500 mL) sea buckthorn berries, fresh or frozen
1 cup (250 mL) water
1 1/2 cups (375 mL) granulated sugar
1/4 cup (60 mL) unsweetened applesauce
2 tbsp (30 mL) or 2 packets powdered gelatin

Directions

- Line an 8x8-inch (20x20 cm) cake pan with plastic wrap and spray lightly with cooking spray.

- Place berries and water in a heavy saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat to low and simmer about 15 minutes, until soft.

- Transfer berry mixture to a fine sieve placed over a bowl. Press down on the pulp and seeds with a wooden spoon to release the juice. You should have about 1 cup (250 mL) thick juice. Discard pulp.

- Pour juice into the saucepan. Stir in sugar and applesauce. Cook on low heat about 10 minutes, stirring, until sugar melts. Remove from heat.

- Meanwhile, in a small bowl, sprinkle gelatin over ½ cup (125 mL) water. Let sit 5 minutes, until soft. Whisk into warm juice mixture then pour into prepared pan. Refrigerate three hours or overnight, until firm. Cut into cubes and serve immediately. Refrigerate leftovers. Makes 6 servings.

Halifax's North End blossoming with foodies

CULTURE

'Homey' sense of community attracts young enterprises

It began a few years ago: One by one, sophisticated, ambitious eateries popped up in Halifax's historic North End.

Restaurants like Edna, Field Guide and the Agricola Street Brasserie emphasized the local — both in their dishes and their relationships — and with them came microbreweries, cafés and other foodie enterprises.

Suddenly, the North End was one of the region's most vibrant food destinations.

"There's a community here," said 36-year-old Ludovic Eveno, co-owner and chef of the award-winning Agricola Street Brasserie, which opened three years ago.

"The businesses around us, like the breweries, we carry their products. So it's a win-win for everybody and it creates this unique community that's very dynamic."

The area, just north of downtown, is typical of gentrifying urban neighbourhoods: Musicians, young professionals and university students share the neighbourhood with low income families. Trendy Gottingen Street eateries like Ratinaud, an artisanal charcuterie, are neighbours with the Salvation Army and a methadone clinic.

It's the area's affordability and sense of community that has attracted young entrepreneurs.

"The food community has been gathering here," said Patricia Cuttell, executive director of the North End Business Association.

"If you look at all the restaurants in the North End, there are some commonalities — the appreciation for seasonal food, the appreciation for local sourcing of food and for providing different kinds of dining experiences."

"The North End, as a whole, holds certain values such as an appreciation for community and an appreciation for local. It aligns with the philosophy's of the restaurants."

In a city where tourists are otherwise mostly offered seafood and nautical souvenirs, Cory Urquhart, co-owner of EnVie on Charles Street, said the district is somewhere to get a sense of real life in Halifax's North End.

"It doesn't seem quite as touristy," said 31-year-old Urquhart, who lives a block away from his restaurant and spends virtually all his time in the area. "It's different from the downtown scene because it has more of a homey feel. It's one big community. Everybody knows everybody, and we all work together to make sure everyone is successful."

Bicycles can often be found parked outside of EnVie — an airy dining space that opened in 2013. Although it's a vegan restaurant, Urquhart said 75 per cent of his customers are not vegan. Menu options include ravioli stuffed with roasted kabocha squash in a dill coconut cream sauce and panko-crushed king oyster mushroom cutlets tossed in a house-made buffalo sauce.

Next door at Lion and Bright — a café-bar hybrid — young professionals can be seen sipping coffee or local craft beers in front of laptops on rustic countertops that are juxtaposed with industrial lighting and exposed pipe. In the evening, staff crank up the music and customers sit on stools at the bar, or gather around long tables, ordering drinks.

Adjacent to Lion and Bright is the Agricola Street Brasserie, which recently won Taste of Nova Scotia's restaurant of the year award. The high ceilings and intricate shelving at the bar serve as the centrepiece of a restaurant that would be at home on Toronto's Ossington stretch.

The district even drew one popular restaurant away from downtown. The Foggy Goggle, tired of disruptive construction of a massive new conference centre, announced last month it is moving to a stretch of Gottingen, the North End's 250-year-old main drag, that also includes several other destination eateries.

Restaurants aren't the only food-related businesses that have opened in the North End. There's also Local Source Market, which offers fresh local products and catering; the just-opened LF Bakery, which has the city's best baguettes; and breweries including North Brewing Company and Unfiltered Brewing.

"It appeals to a lot of people who call the North End home and it's attracting people from all over the city. Now visitors to Halifax are coming to the North End to experience food," said Cuttell.

IF YOU GO...

EnVie — A Vegan Kitchen, located at 5775 Charles St., and is open Tuesday to Friday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Lion and Bright, located at 2534 Agricola St., is open daily from 7 a.m. to 1 a.m., except for Monday when it closes at 5 p.m. The bistro bar stays open until 2 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Amy Adams, who plays a linguist in Arrival, says as a mom in her 40s she's at a crossroads. The film, which has a significant motherhood context, helped her with this internal shift. CONTRIBUTED

Amy Adams no longer plays a princess

INTERVIEW

Actress veers away from innocence in latest films

For a time, Amy Adams, a former chorus girl from Colorado, was known for her princesses and country girls: sweet and sunny characters that helped make Adams a star.

"I call them the innocents —like Picasso, my 'innocent period,'" Adams says, chuckling. "But the naivety or anything that I brought to a role, I didn't feel trapped by it. I thought each of them saw the world in a different way. I was perplexed that people saw me in that way but I understood it. I didn't know when or how that would change, but I knew it needed to in order for me to evolve as an actress."

That evolution has been going on for some time, from the forceful restraint of her performances in Doubt and The Master to more unbridled outings in a pair of David O. Russell films, The Fighter and American Hustle. At 42, she is already a five-time Oscar nominee. But this fall, in a pair of intelligent, layered performances, Adams' expanding range and growing complexity has never been more on view.

In Denis Villeneuve's Arrival, she stars as a linguist tasked by the government with communicating with newly landed aliens whose sleek, orb-like ships are mysteriously hovering just off the ground. The movie, which opens Friday, is thick with a Close Encounters of the Third Kind atmosphere and resonant — through Adams' performance — with deeper emotions than your average sci-fi film.

Adams also stars in Tom Ford's Nocturnal Animals (out Nov. 18), as a Manhattan gallerist trapped in an unhappy marriage. When a novel written by her first husband (Jake Gyllenhaal) arrives, she's teleported into a fictional world. The book's story, a bloody thriller, is heavy with personal subtext.

"Both of these characters come to a crossroads and I feel like I'm at a bit of a crossroads," Adams reflected in an interview in September at the Toronto International Film Festival, where both films played.

"It's being a mom and entering my 40s and looking at things in a different way, a way that has been really awesome," Adams said of her shift. "I feel really happy about the changes that have happened internally. I feel like these films helped that happen."

But those changes, she says, are mostly about finding a balance between her career and her family life. She and husband Darren Le Gallo have a six-year-old daughter. Though spelling out the connection would give too much away, motherhood was an especially powerful influence on Arrival. Adams agreed to do the film within 24 hours of being sent the script.

"Every time I start talking about my daughter in relationship to Arrival, it goes straight to tears," says Adams. "My husband saw the film before I did and he couldn't talk to me for a while."

Adams' range as an actress is a sneaky kind. There are no tales of tortured transformations. She simply keeps showing up in role after role, fully inhabiting a character with warmth and smarts while, to varying degrees, remaining herself.

Working with her acting coach, Warner Loughlin, Adams builds the essence of a character in advance of shooting so that she can be free and reactive on set. That was especially necessary in both Arrival and Nocturnal Animals because both films call on her to express much without speaking. In the latter, she's often just reading.

"I have to be active and I have to drive a sort of emotional core through the movie," says Adams, "but yet I'm very much reactive at the same time. In Nocturnal Animals, I was alone a lot."

Villeneuve, the Quebecois director of Sicario and Prisoners, says he needed a strong actress who could emote a lot while often acting against a tennis ball.

"I knew that the movie would be on her shoulders," says Villeneuve. "I wanted someone who you could read what she was going through without words. The movie is Amy Adams, to me."

The air is too thin in this TV heaven

THE SHOW: The Good Place, Season 1, Episode 4 (Global)
THE MOMENT: The new roommates

Eleanor (Kristen Bell) and Chidi (William Jackson Harper) died recently. They now exist in "the good place," a heaven-ish, perfect small town run by Michael (Ted Danson). They're supposed to be soul mates. But there's a problem: Eleanor was nasty on Earth. She's in paradise by mistake. Her presence has disturbed its energy, creating a sinkhole.

Michael asks Eleanor and Chidi to house a couple who've been displaced by the sinkhole — a marriage counsellor and a psychological profiler. Chidi pulls Eleanor aside. "They're going to catch us!" he hisses. "I am vexed!"

"They have no reason to suspect us," Eleanor says. "I think they may have just come here to, you know, swing. I say we do it! It'll get them to stop asking questions."

"I'm not going to have sex with someone to get them to stop talking to me," Chidi protests. "Really?" Eleanor asks. "You and I are very different."

Series creator Michael Schur wrote for Saturday Night Live and The Office and co-created Parks and Recreation and Brooklyn Nine-Nine. Here he's reaching for high-concept: Can Chidi, an ethics professor on Earth, teach Eleanor, whose misdeeds we see in flashbacks, to be good?

The problem with any high concept, however, is that the air is thin up there. Because the situation is so unreal, it's hard to invest in the characters. It's like straining to keep confetti from falling.

The most important remark I heard when driving people around in the Nissan Pathfinder was, "Wow, this is comfortable."

People who remember Nissan Pathfinders from back in the day remember the truck-based-SUV that, while capable off-road, was a brute and not at all easy to drive anywhere civilized. This 2017 Nissan Pathfinder, which has just been refreshed, is still built on a unibody platform, something it looks like the SUV will do for the foreseeable future.

Why will Nissan stick to unibody? Because no one actually takes their Pathfinder off-road anymore — this is a crossover aimed at families who need space and a bit of capability, not a military-grade tank. During my time with the seven-seat Pathfinder, I used it to take a day trip into wine country, visit an outlet mall, ferry around my parents, pick up some pumpkins, and take a few bags of clothing to a donation depot. The worst conditions it saw was a gravel road.

But that's not to say the Pathfinder has gone completely soft. Although there is no option to lock the car in lower gears, the Pathfinder should be able to easily handle most eventualities like a snow storm, dirt trail to the cottage, or drive across a field to get a Christmas tree.

Through a three-mode drive selector on the center console, you can choose to drive only the front wheels for maximum fuel efficiency, you can let the car decide where the power is needed in auto mode, or you can lock the rear differential for more challenging conditions.

The SUV also has a hill descent mode, which is like cruise control for driving down steep hills. It keeps the car at a crawling speed so if you are off-roading, you don't have to modulate the brakes or throttle; all you'd have to take care of is steering and making sure your wheels are pointed where you want to go.

The most standout aspect is how comfortable it is and how easy it is to drive in an urban environment.

I had no difficulty navigating the three-row SUV around condo parking garages, with the steering light enough at slow speeds to make tight turns effortless. A top-down 360-degree overhead view is displayed on screen when reversing or can be turned on at parking lot speeds, which makes things a lot easier. Even parallel parking was effortless because of that camera.

Sitting in the cushy driver's seat, you have a commanding view of the road, even with the thick A-pillar making for a pretty big blind spot. Rearward blind spots are not a huge issue, as blind-spot monitoring and large windows and side mirrors help alleviate the stress of driving such a large vehicle.

MACHO POWER WAGON

Ram brings the brawn

If you're looking for a tough truck that isn't all bark and no bite, the Ram Macho Power Wagon is one concept from the 2016 SEMA Show that fits the bill. Taking its name from the Power Wagon trim level from the 1970s, the Macho takes the Power Wagon's off-road capability and versatility up a few notches with Mopar concept and production products.

TESLA

Model S gets new glass roof option

Tesla has introduced a new glass roof option for its Model S and has discontinued P90D models for the Model S and Model X. The change was spotted on the U.S. electric automaker's website by Electrek, and the new all-glass roof will cost $1,500 in the U.S., while the panoramic sunroof option will cost $2,000, which is needed for roof rack and satellite radio compatibility. Tesla says the new roof gives the electric sedan an "open, expansive cabin feel," but not much other information on the new roof is available. Another change spotted in the online car configurator is that the P90D model has been discontinued. Customers can still buy a 90D, but without the P designation, Ludicrous mode can't be added on.

HYUNDAI

Genesis to sell cars online

Hyundai's luxury brand Genesis, the automaker behind the G80 and G90 luxury sedans is launching a new way of selling its cars in Canada. Called Genesis at Home, the brand will let potential customers shop for a vehicle online, get a final quote, complete financing or lease paperwork, put a deposit and order a vehicle from the automaker's centralized inventory — all online. That means there's no dealing with suggested prices, pushy sales people or hidden costs. The fixed cost of a new Genesis also includes scheduled maintenance (for five years or 100,000 km).

Toyota proves Prius can handle like a sports car

Teaming up with builder Gordon Ting of Beyond Marketing, Toyota has introduced the Prius G at the 2016 SEMA Show, inspired by the Japanese Prius GT300 race car. But this project wasn't just about transforming the mundane hybrid to a car that looks fast, Ting built the Prius to hold its own on the racetrack. And to prove the point, the Toyota Prius G was taken out to Willow Springs International Raceway where it pulled 0.99 g on the skid pad.

7 CAR LOGOS THAT ARE AHEAD OF THE PACK

Every car company has its own logo and, like the vehicles they build, some are better than others. Some are weird (like Toyota's oval emblem) or boring (like GMC's consonants) and may never win any graphic design awards but there are still plenty of vehicular brands with elegant and classy logos with interesting backstories. Here's a list of our seven favourite. CRAIG COLE/AUTOGUIDE.COM

1 Audi

One of the most elegant automotive logos of all time is one of the most difficult to explain. This firm's emblem is comprised of four interlocking rings, one for each brand that formed the now-defunct company Auto Union. The companies represented in this beautifully rendered logo include Horch, Wanderer, DKW and Audi. It's a difficult story to explain, but the result is one of our favorite logos.

2 BMW

Unquestionably, this fabled German luxury car maker has one of the nicest insignias in the automotive world. The blue-and-white motif is a stand in for the Bavarian flag.

3 Porsche

This firm's sporty products are lusted after by enthusiasts around the globe. Curiously, the Porsche emblem is a hybrid of sorts, with city of Stuttgart's coat of arms plunked in the center of a field borrowed from the heraldic symbol for the Kingdom of Württemberg. Makes sense, right?

4 Alfa Romeo

Another automaker with a seriously beautiful emblem is Alfa Romeo. Just like Porsche's, it's comprised of various heraldic symbols. The prominent red cross represents the city of Milan, this prestigious automaker's birthplace. As for the crowned serpent, it stands for the House of Visconti, a noble Italian family. How neat is that? Owning an Alfa Romeo is kind of like being friends with royalty... sort of.

5 Mazda

Rendered in shiny chrome, Mazda's logo is both simple and intriguing. Clearly, it's a stylized "M," but this motif also bears more than a passing resemblance to a blooming tulip. Additionally, those with a keen eye and vivid imagination might notice a soaring bird with its wings spread wide. What do you see in this automotive Rorschach test?

6 Volkswagen

The history of Volkswagen is rather dark. The people's car brand directly traces its roots back to Nazi Germany. In the mid-1930s, Hitler wanted an affordable car that could mobilize the Reich's population. Ultimately, the company's Beetle would do this, even if it didn't hit its stride until well after the Second World War ended. Anyhow, despite its troubled past, Volkswagen has one of the coolest, most graphically pleasing emblems of any automaker. It's comprised of a capital "V" perched atop a large "W," with everything circumscribed neatly by a circle. It's clean, elegant and still cool all these years later.

7 Subaru

Subaru is best known for its rally-racing heritage and unique devotion to all-wheel drive, but in addition to all of this, it also has a pretty neat logo. Do you know what the firm's twinkling emblem represents? Well, if you're an amateur astronomer, you might have a clue, if not, you'll still probably enjoy this tidbit of info. The company's logo actually represents the Pleiades star cluster, which is found in the Taurus constellation. Why this particular group of stars? Subaru is the Japanese word for a group of stars found in the constellation.

THE CAR BRANDS MOST CELEBRATED BY RAPPERS

GoCompare.com did an analysis of more than 62,000 songs on Rap Genius from artists on the Top 40 Rap US Billboard Charts across the past decade and a list of the 100 greatest rappers of all time to determine which automakers are most rapped about. JASON SIU/AUTOGUIDE.COM

Mercedes-Benz

But pulling away by a large majority is Mercedes-Benz, with 3,238 car mentions. Often referred to as "Benz" or "Merc" in rap lyrics, the German automaker can be heard in songs by Mase, Dr. Dre and A Tribe Called Quest. A Mercedes 300SL was used in Kanye West's video Diamonds From Sierra Leone to smash through a shop window.

Ferrari

Often shortened to "Rari" in songs, the Italian automaker has become the go-to brand for stylish transportation and lyrical inspiration. Atlanta rapper T.I. famously owns one, while other artists like Drake, T-Pain and Tyga have recently made mention of Ferrari in their songs.

Chevrolet

In the '90s, Chevy was known as the car of West Coast hip hop, made famous by Dr. Dre, Snoop Dogg and more. Today, artists like A$AP Rocky, Killer Mike, Juicy J, T.I., Gucci Mane and Rick Ross all rap about the new generation of Chevys.

Bentley

A favorite among rappers for offering the ideal blend of luxury and performance, Bentley has been mentioned in songs by Wyclef Jean, Common and Drake. And then there's the famous bright pink Bentley Continental owned by Nicki Minaj

OTHERS THAT MADE THE TOP TEN

Rolls-Royce
With 648 mentions, British luxury automaker Rolls-Royce lands in 10th place on the list.

Maybach
Maybach might best be known in hip hop for when Jay Z and Kanye modified one for the Otis video.

Lamborghini
Lambo finds its way on the list with 964 mentions, including in songs by artists Akon and Missy Elliott.

Carter scores twice leading visitors to rout

TUESDAY At ACC

KINGS	LEAFS

The Toronto Maple Leafs' three-game winning streak ended with a thud on Tuesday night.

Jeff Carter scored a pair of goals and Peter Budaj made 19 saves as the Los Angeles Kings trounced the Leafs 7-0 at the Air Canada Centre. Los Angeles busted out four goals in the second period, putting an end to Frederik Andersen's night.

Andersen gave up four goals on 26 shots and was pulled for the first time in a Leafs uniform. Jhonas Enroth stepped in to make 14 saves in relief.

Dustin Brown, Tanner Pearson, Tyler Toffoli, Kyle Clifford and Dwight King also scored for the Kings, who have now won three in a row. It's the second win streak of at least three games for Los Angeles this season.

Riding high after three wins in a row of their own, the Leafs got schooled by their more veteran opponent from puck-drop.

The Kings had the bulk of chances in the first, scoring 14 minutes into the period on Brown's second this year. Third-line centre Nic Dowd did most of the dirty work, controlling the puck down low in Toronto's zone before finding Brown atop the left face-off circle.

The league leader in shots per game (34.5) heading into play, Toronto was held to just five shots (matching a season low) in the first frame. The NHL's best shot suppression outfit, the Kings have given up less than 30 shots in 11 consecutive games. Overall shot attempts, tellingly, were 43-19 favouring the visitors.

"They're a big, heavy team; they don't turn pucks over, they play right," Leafs coach Mike Babcock said of the Kings on Tuesday morning.

Setoguchi thanks Leafs GM for opportunity

If you wanted any proof small acts of kindness can have a big impact, then look no further than Devin Setoguchi's triumphant return to the NHL and the role of Maple Leafs GM Lou Lamoriello.

Setoguchi was coming out of rehab for alcohol addiction in the spring of 2015. He was overweight and out of shape. Yet Lamoriello called. Newly installed as the general manager in Toronto, Lamoriello offered Setoguchi a professional tryout at the Leafs' training camp.

"After I cleaned myself up, I spoke with Lou and he was willing to give me a fair shake," Setoguchi said. "He was always in contact. He's a really good person, a good judge of character. For me, it was important to meet a guy like that.

"It helped me this year go to training camp (with the Kings) having been to one (with the Leafs) the year before. I have him to thank for that."

Tryouts are long shots at best. Setoguchi didn't make the Leafs last year. Lamoriello cut him, but early enough so he could get a job in Switzerland. It turned out for the best.

"I didn't have a good camp," Setoguchi said of his time with the Leafs. "I knew that. I had a couple of games and I didn't play very well. It's pretty simple.

"But he was straight up with me when he said: 'We're going to let you go now so you have an opportunity to go overseas.'"

Getting his life on track, and his training regimen down, helped Setoguchi land a job this season with the Kings.

"He had a good training camp," Los Angeles coach Darryl Sutter said. "It's a good story. He's a guy you want to see do well, and he's played very well for us."

Cavs taste defeat with loss to Hawks

Dennis Schroder scored a career-high 28 points and the Atlanta Hawks handed the reigning NBA champion Cleveland Cavaliers their first loss of the season, 110-106 on Tuesday night.

Cleveland (6-1) cut a 96-81 deficit early in the fourth quarter to 101-97 on LeBron James' basket with 3:14 to play. The Hawks scored the next six points, but three-pointers by James and Kyrie Irving made it 106-103 with 48 seconds left.

Paul Milsap's basket pushed the lead to five, but Kevin Love converted a three-point play with 25 seconds remaining. Kent Bazemore's jumper from the corner with seven seconds left put the game away.

Bazemore scored 25 points while Millsap added 21. Dwight Howard, who received four stitches for a bloody lip in the first half, had 17 rebounds.

Irving led Cleveland with 29 points. Love added 24 while James, who scored two points in the first half, had 23.

Atlanta finished the second quarter on a 22-6 run to lead 53-42. James didn't score until he hit a jumper late in the first half.

Hawks guard Kyle Korver did not travel to Cleveland after the birth of his third child Sunday.

Atlanta had lost 11 straight to Cleveland, including playoff sweeps the last two seasons.

Cubs boss named exec of the year

Theo Epstein has been voted The Sporting News Major League Baseball Executive of the Year for revitalizing the Chicago Cubs.

Balloting by 56 big-league executives took place before the post-season. The Cubs led the majors with 103 wins during the regular season and beat Cleveland in a seven-game World Series last week for their first title since 1908.

"We'd love to be the type of organization that national baseball fans think of when you think of October baseball," said Epstein, the Cubs' president of baseball operations.

Bills' Ryan sounds off ahead of bye week

NFL

Head coach has many issues in aftermath of loss in Seattle

Rex Ryan and the Bills were left frustrated in Monday's 31-25 loss in Seattle. JOHN FROSCHAUER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Before taking a few days off during the Bills bye week, coach Rex Ryan had a few frustrations to get off his chest regarding the Seahawks, and one of their fans who taunted Buffalo assistant Kathryn Smith.

Ryan rallied to the defence of Smith, who was the target of sexist comments from the stands. And he also took a verbal jab at Seahawks coach Pete Carroll during a telephone conference call with reporters on Tuesday.

Ryan was particularly upset upon learning what happened to Smith, the NFL's first full-time female assistant during Buffalo's 31-25 loss on Monday night .

Rochester's WROC-TV filmed a male fan yelling, "Waitress! Waitress. Can I have a Pepsi, please," at Smith as she walked along the sideline.

"Well, I think that's ridiculous," said Ryan, who promoted Smith to be Buffalo's special teams quality control coach in January.

"I think that's really classless," Ryan said, noting he's accustomed to being taunted.

"Now look, I get ripped all the time and that's cool. I'm free game," he said.

Ryan also took issue with Carroll.

Carroll was unhappy the Bills coach called Seahawks cornerback Richard Sherman "an ass."

Sherman caused several stirs during a thrilling back-and-forth game marred by officiating errors.

Sherman was penalized for offside when he dived and collided with kicker Dan Carpenter during a field-goal attempt in the final seconds of the first half.

NFL head of officiating Dean Blandino said referee Walt Anderson and his crew made a mistake by noting Sherman should have been penalized for roughing the kicker. The ruling proved costly because an ensuing delay of game penalty against Buffalo eventually led to Carpenter missing a 54-yard attempt wide right.

Blandino also ruled Anderson's crew should not have flagged the Bills for delay of game.

In the second half, Sherman made a play near the Bills sidelined and then exchanged words and attempted to stare down Ryan.

"I had some words," Ryan said following the game. "I think I said that, 'You're too good of a player to act like an ass.'"

Otherwise, Ryan was ready to move on.

"Obviously, it's frustrating," he said. "But it's in the past now. It's behind us."

Even if Louisville pivot Lamar Jackson wins the Heisman Trophy in a landslide, there may still be a slew of finalists in December.

There are always at least three finalists but there could be more depending on point totals and the gap between vote-getters. Jackson is listed at 1-to-20 by online casino Bovada to win the award.

Jose's act wearing thin already at Old Trafford?

PREMIER LEAGUE

Man United boss raises eyebrows by scolding players publicly

Jose Mourinho hasn't been making many friends at Old Trafford over the last few weeks.
OLI SCARFF/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

Jose Mourinho has picked fights throughout his trophy-laden coaching career, typically against soccer authorities, match officials, the media and opposing managers.

Now, he's increasingly taking on his own players.

The joyless, turbulent opening months of his tenure at Manchester United have been pockmarked with public outbursts against the team in general but also against specific individuals.

England defender Luke Shaw has taken the brunt of it.

Six weeks ago, Mourinho was openly critical of Shaw's defensive work in United's 3-1 loss to Watford in the Premier League. On Sunday, Shaw was one of two players — the other being Chris Smalling — criticized by Mourinho for failing to play through the pain for a league game against Swansea.

"There is a difference," Mourinho said, "between the brave, who want to be there at any cost, and the ones for whom a little pain can make a difference."

Usually, the Portuguese coach makes such comments after a loss or poor performance, using them as a kind of diversionary tactic in classic Mourinho style. Except on this occasion, United had just won 3-1, meaning the remarks in some respects sabotaged what had been an important win for the club after a recent run of poor form. Also, Shaw was a strange target, given the left back missed most of last season because of a broken leg and has felt discomfort since.

Even Alex Ferguson, United's often-volatile managerial great, would protect individual players from public criticism at all costs.

"I could criticize my team publicly," Ferguson said in his recent autobiography, "but I could never castigate an individual after the game to the media. The supporters were entitled to know when I was unhappy with a performance. But not an individual."

Mourinho used to abide by this unwritten managerial code.

150M

Man United, the record 20-time champion of England, spent about 150 million pounds (about $185 million US) on new players in the recent transfer window.

Frank Lampard, one of Mourinho's disciples from his two spells at Chelsea, explained in 2013 how the Portuguese coach used his outbursts in the media to create a storm deliberately.

"But he does protect his players," Lampard said.

Nowadays, it seems, he does it to protect himself.

The personal attacks so early in his United tenure stick out and it's a worrying echo of the final days of his most recent job. His second stint at Chelsea ended sourly in December 2015, when he was fired days after saying his players had "betrayed" his work by defending so poorly in a 2-1 loss at Leicester.

Chelsea said there had been a "palpable discord between manager and players."

It could be heading the same way at United.

WORLD CUP QUALIFIER

Messi back just in time to face Brazil

Lionel Messi is back from injury, just the tonic Argentina needs in Thursday's World Cup qualifier against Brazil.

Messi missed Argentina's last three qualifying matches with an injured left knee, and the results showed with draws against Peru and Venezuela, and a 1-0 loss against Paraguay.

Thursday's match takes place in the same stadium where Brazil was humiliated two years ago in a 7-1 loss to Germany in the World Cup semi-finals. But this time, the hosts will be focusing on containing Messi.

"It's impossible to stop the ball from reaching Messi because he will start floating around to get it," Brazil midfielder Renato Augusto said. "We need to take him out of his comfort zone." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chile to sit out Sanchez

Alexis Sanchez has picked up a leg injury in training and will miss Chile's World Cup qualifier against Colombia on Thursday.

Instead of travelling to Colombia's Caribbean city of Barranquilla, the Chilean football federation says in a statement Tuesday that the Arsenal star "will stay in Santiago and will be treated for Chile's next match against Uruguay" on Nov. 15 in Santiago.

Concussion replays being considered by FIFA

Doctors could be allowed to watch TV replays of collisions from the touchline next season and then have matches stopped in response to growing concerns about the dangers of concussion.

Medics would be given time to assess if a player needs to be substituted, if the International Football Association Board grants approval in March.

RECIPE Baked Fried Chicken

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

Toss chicken into buttermilk in the morning and you'll get crunchy yet tender results come dinner time.

Ready in 1 1/2 hours

Cook time: 30 minutes
Serves 4 to 6

Ingredients
- 1/4 cup buttermilk (or add a tsp of vinegar to regular milk and let it sit for 15 minutes)
- 1 garlic clove, minced
- 8 or 9 chicken pieces (thighs and drumsticks)
- 1 1/2 cups whole wheat bread crumbs
- 2 Tbsp fresh thyme
- 1 1/2 tsp lemon zest
- Salt and pepper to taste

Directions
1. Combine the buttermilk and garlic together in a shallow pan container. Coat the chicken pieces thoroughly and cover with plastic wrap. Place in the fridge to marinate for a half an hour or up to over night. Turn the chicken pieces over at least once while marinating.
2. Preheat the oven to 400 F.
3. Mix bread crumbs in a bowl together with the thyme, zest and salt and pepper.
4. Dredge chicken pieces in the bread crumb mixture and place them on a baking sheet. Press bread crumbs onto the meat if some falls off.
5. Bake for 30 to 40 minutes until the outside of the chicken is deeply golden and the meat is cooked through.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
Competition, especially in physical sports, will be strong during the month ahead. You want to outdo someone at his or her own game.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
Your ambition is aroused during the next six weeks, which is why you want to show the world what you can do. This is good, but don't be a threat to bosses and co-workers.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
You want to travel and break free of restrictions in the month ahead. However, you can use this same energy to study and explore avenues in publishing, the media, medicine and the law.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
Disputes about inheritances, shared property, taxes and debt will be your focus in the month ahead. Someone at work will be supportive of you.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
For the next month, you'll need patience when dealing with others, because fiery Mars is opposite your sign. This can make you impatient, critical and judgmental of others.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
During the month ahead, you will work hard, long hours. Your focus, endurance and stamina will make you the leader of the pack!

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You will put out a lot of energy in the next month into having fun. Expect to be involved in the arts, the entertainment world and sports events.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
In the month ahead, your home scene will be chaotic. Visiting relatives and residential moves or renovations means you have to be more patient with family members.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Your ability to use your words to get what you want will be amazing during the month ahead. It's a strong time for those of you who sell, market, teach and act!

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You will work hard in the coming month to earn money, because you're motivated! One of the reasons for this could be that you are spending a lot as well.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Fiery Mars is in your sign for the next six weeks, making you forthright and proactive. That's why you will get so much done. Look out, world!

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Many of you will work behind the scenes or alone during the next six weeks. This is wise. You will get more done this way.
